Go California Native

Santa Barbara County has done a remarkable job of saving water during this unprecedented drought but can we continue to save water and create beautiful and useful gardens? California natives should be a part of our water conserving future. Properly selected natives are good for the environment and fit well in almost any landscape style. Also in this episode, Oscar Carmona shows us how to plant nursery plants. Check out a great free online tool for landscape design, and learn how to check your sprinkler system for leaks.
